Not illustrated. 1891 Excerpt: .way to answer all such queries is by practical demonstrations, and it was determined to conduct an experiment bearing on the point in question. Milk was taken immediately after milking and set in Cooley cans, in water at a temperature of 420. The temperature of the milk was 980. The milk set from seven in the evening until 7:45 the next morning, or nearly thirteen hours, when it was skimmed. At that time the temperature of the water was 40, the ice used having reduced the temperature two degrees. The skim milk was drawn off by means of the syphons provided for that purpose at the bottom of the cans. The first one and one-fourth inches of milk immediately below the cream line were left with the cream. This cream was then well mixed with the morning s milk from the same cows, and weighed and...
