Printed it was and issued on April 16, 1814, only five days after the abdication had been signed. Byron had no objection to its being said to be mine, and there was no mystery about it. The ode was accepted by the critics as his, and treated accordingly. The thirteenth edition soon saw the light. So recently as 1903 a translation into Hindustani was printed at Lahore. Two anonymous poems by two eminent authors were published together on August 6, 1814. One was Lara, by Byron, the other Jacqueline, by Rogers. This union of fire and water only existed for a short time. A divorce then ensued. But the first separate impression of Jacqueline was also...
