Excerpt: .she added; and we will speak gently of him, and try to learn those good lessons better ourselves; for it is well to be loving, humble, industrious, and content. CHAPTER IX. THE COAST-GUARD S BEAT. Jhat is charming! said Rose, looking up brightly, as Miss Deward ceased talking. I always did like fables, they are so easy; and it is funny to fancy the animals and birds and fishes being able to talk; and the meaning of that story is just what the anemone said, It is good to be humble and loving and busy and contented. Oh, dear! what is that? exclaimed Lettice, as a long river of sand fell down the face of the low cliff beneath where they were sitting. Oh dear! echoed Rose, as three or four pebbles followed the sand, and came clattering down from the top of the rock....
